OF EIGHT POOR SERVANT GIRLS

Whom He Robbed, Outraged and Then Murdered.-He Confesses His Crime .- A Terrible Story.

JIESNA, Jan. 27.-The sensational trial of Frank Schneider and his wife, Resalie Schneider, which was begun in this city yesterday, was continued today and many new and startling facts in connection with the revolting crimes alleged to have been committed by the couple were brought out during the proceedings. The prisoners are charged with having mordered and robbed eight servant girls, and the sified by the additional charge made against Schneider of having first outraged his victims before putting an end to their lives. During the course of the trial Schneider admitted that in two instances he was guilty of the charge of violating the girls and also admitted that he had killed one of the unfortunate servants. He endeavored to throw the guilt of the endeavored to throw the guitt of the other murderr on his wife, whom he accused of decoying the girls to their late on the pretense of giving them employment in her residence. These charges made by the husband against his wife were the cause of an exciting scene between the guity party in the court room, both indulging in a violent exchange of acquisitions. Ghastly exhibits were produced by the prosecution during the proceedings in the shape of the skull and hair of Rosalie Kiemrath, one of the murdered girls, and the torn and bloody clothing worn by her at the time of ner death.

He said that he had not employed chloroform in any in-tance. His victims were always conscious when he attacked them, and he v a as-sisted in his horrible work by his wife. His wife, he declared, used to hold the hands of the struggling girls while he grasped them by the neck and choked their lives out. At this point Mrs. Schneider interrupted her husband by excitedly shouting: "I am your next ledical evidence was produced to show the great strenght possessed by Schneifer. This testimony was brought out for the purpose of showing that Schneiler was so strong that he did not need the aid of his wife to grasp the throats of his victims and choke them to death. of his victime and choke them to death.

Schneider here volunteered to tell how the murders were committed and dramatically went through led and dramatically went through led and dramatically went through led and selection with the led and selection led and select the blood-curdling performance. He showed how he used to seize the strug-gling victims by the breast with his left hand and with his powerful right hand blutch them by the throat and thus strangle the poor creatures. In con-cluding his confession Schneider said that he had not killed the first woman he had outraged and rebbed because he had not at that time had the praclice in the method of strangling which be afterward acquired.
